3 Things to Know About Early College

1. Early College = More Opportunity

- Take real college classes
- Earn free college credits
- Explore your future while still in high school

Students have the opportunity to take college classes while in high school.

Mount Miguel is becoming Mount Miguel Early College High School
—expanding opportunities for students

MOUNT MIGUEL
Early College High School

2. Students will be supported.

- Students will be part of a small team of teachers and counselors who know them well and help them succeed.
- Through our house system, students receive personalized guidance, stronger relationships, and academic support.

3. Our new schedule opens doors.

Our new 4x4 schedule

- aligns with the college terms
- creates more opportunities for electives, support, and taking college classes
- allows students to take fewer classes at a time, allowing deeper learning and more flexibility.

Honoring our Biliteracy Champions 2025-2026

Julie Loschen - San Altos Elementary

Mrs. Julie Loschen is a cornerstone of the San Altos community, bringing decades of service, deep institutional knowledge, and an unwavering love for her students and families. She creates a foundation of safety and belonging where multilingual learners can thrive both personally and academically. Her dedication goes beyond instruction; she models the beauty and power of biliteracy, expressing pride in her own bilingualism and showing students that their home language is an academic asset and a source of strength.

Mrs. Loschen's impact extends beyond the classroom through her leadership in ELAC meetings, where she empowers families with clear, accessible information about support services and reclassification. She celebrates reclassification as a major milestone and consistently honors her students' achievements, embodying what it means to be a true champion for multilingual learners.

Maria Hidalgo - San Miguel Elementary

Maria Hidalgo is a dedicated FACE Liaison who consistently champions our multilingual learner community by empowering families with the knowledge and tools to confidently navigate educational systems. She thoughtfully breaks down complex processes such as ELPAC and reclassification so families feel informed, supported, and valued. Through workshops and individualized outreach, Maria builds authentic relationships rooted in trust and ensures parents understand their rights and opportunities, positioning them as true partners in their children's education.

Maria also uplifts students' home languages and cultures, reinforcing that bilingualism is an asset to be nurtured. She encourages families to continue developing their home language at home, strengthening cultural pride and identity. Her unwavering commitment to equity and multilingualism truly embodies what it means to be a Biliteracy Champion.
